College Clock Runs Down As Classes Make Farewells

BY FAITH REINER

As the school year draws to a close at Concordia, many of the clubs and classes are terminating their activities with a final party.

Last Friday, the Junior Red Cross Club spent an enjoyable evening at White Mud Creek Park. A new kind of baseball game highlighted the sports period. A singsong, wiener roast, a devotion, led by club president Cliff Stangeland, filled out the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Erich A. von Fange were host to the college department students at a lawn party at their home last Saturday evening. After playing games and singing spirituals, the group had lunch. The closing devotion was led by Wilson Porat.

The Grade 11 class had their final party at Rainbow Valley on Sunday night, featuring horseback riding, games, wiener roast, singsong, and closing worship. Anola Lange was the convener.

YEAR BOOK DISTRIBUTED

The "Corona Borealis," the college year book, was distributed last Saturday and featured a full color picture of the two main buildings on campus, Schwermann Hall and Guild Hall. Ray Ensminger was editor, Lawrence Koehler was business manager, Anola Lange was co-ed representative and Alfred Maier and Mr. Arnold Guebert were the photographers. Mr. Albert H. Miller was the faculty adviser.

The Concordia baseball team ended its season last Saturday at Camrose, bowing to the Camrose Lutheran College team by a 8 - 4 score.

COMMITTEES REPORT

The final student body meeting was held last Friday. The chairmen of the many committees and councils each gave two minute reports of the activities of their groups. Suggestions offered for next year's activities include a Homecoming Carnival in the fall and more events sponsored by the Social Committee. Wayne Stuhlmiller, student body president, bade farewell to the students on behalf of the graduates.

The baccalaureate service was held today at Redeemer Lutheran Church. The graduation banquet will take place tonight at 7 p.m. in downtown Edmonton, and the graduation service will be held at Alumni Hall on the campus at 8 p.m. Sunday.
