How to Fail a Final Exam

By Adrienne Swelander

Keep in mind these tips are to help FAIL an exam. If you want to pass a course DO NOT do these things. The Blue & White takes no responsibility for students who fail their exams.

1. Don't go to the exam.
2. Instead of answering any of the questions, draw pretty pictures for your professor.
3. Challenge yourself to break a record. Write the entire exam in under five minutes.
4. Take the final exam of a class you're not enrolled in.
5. Sleep through it.
6. Cheat off the person sitting next to you. Don't forget to put their name on it, too.
7. Answer all the questions with a question.
8. Don't read any of the questions, instead, write down anything you remember your professor said. It doesn't have to relate to the course.
9. Answer all the question in a different language. For example, if you are writing a French test answer in English or Hebrew.
10. On the multiple choice sections choose "abba dabba cabba da" and continue repeating it until you run out of questions. To guarantee a failing mark, use this same system for your essay questions.

Beware! There's a Bully about!

By Denny Tus

Imagine my surprise when I heard that someone had experienced a Bully on campus! I had believed that, akin to the Dodo, the Bully was well nigh extinct, certainly not to be seen on a college campus! Amazed I listened to not one, but countless similar stories from those having had the misfortune of personal contact with this Bully. The emotional carnage and spiritual trauma this beast was wreaking was almost beyond belief.

Shouldn't someone trap this Bully and send it to the Psych. Department (where I understand the Bully is well known) for counselling? After all, we know that a Bully is a creature that gets its kicks from badgering, tormenting and humiliating smaller and weaker beings.

So, what should we do? Is it physically bigger than the average student? No! Is it physically stronger than the average student? No! Does it have influential friends? Yes! Oops, there's the rub! How can we defend ourselves from a Bully with influence?

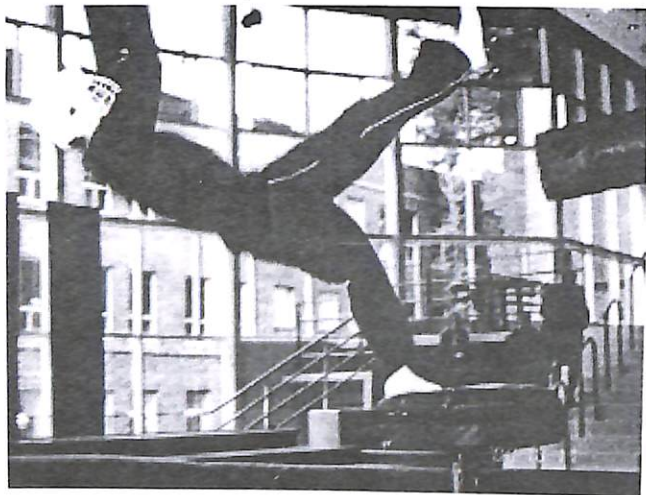

Avoid it like the very devil! Have absolutely no truck or trade with it! Tell everyone you know and talk to, to similarly avoid it. Pass the message on!

We pay a lot of money to learn at this University and I don't see anything on my account that includes being attacked by a Bully. There are some amazing and interesting things that happen here on a Christian campus, but I never thought they would include a

Cognitive Bias

By James Gordon

The voting season is here again. Questions like, "Who should I vote for?" or, "What will this party do for me and my country?" pop into our heads.

Well, I have heard some of the buzz around school and I'd like to make a few comments. One of the 'buzzes' I have been hearing is that you shouldn't vote for Stockwell Day or his party because you'd be voting for the KKK to get into power. Can this be true? Nope.

Firstly, I can't say I know Stockwell Day all that well but I have had friends who work for him and the fact that he is a Christian with Christian values and morals makes him the best candidate so far. True, this is just my opinion, but if anything he will always know that he is accountable to God whereas our past Prime Ministers didn't think they were accountable to anyone, especially God or the people of this country.

Good old Stockwell won't break promises to his fellow Canadians because he is accountable and he knows it. Didn't sweetie-pie Johnny Chretien say before the last election that he promised to: a) get rid of the GST; b) make changes to the Criminal Code; c) promises of tax reforms (by lowering them); d) and to change the young offenders act to be less lenient? Wasn't he the guy who took $25 million from our healthcare system? I'm sure the list goes on and on. Who is Chretien accountable too? Actually, he too is also accountable to God but he doesn't make God a priority in his lifestyle and will face those repercussions some day. But our good buddy Stockwell, who appears to be a goof sometimes, dressed in a wetsuit or dodging chocolate milk from anti-Alliance kids, will be accountable and he knows it. You have to respect a guy like that.

Have fun at the voting booths, and remember, God knows who you're voting for.

A Liberal Feminist V "Ewe" Point

By Melanie Golding

Election time has arrived and let the mudslinging begin!! I know some of you are intent on making an "informed" decision when voting time comes around and some of you really don't know what you will do. I am here to help out a wee bit, and also to annoy my esteemed fellow classmate, James (and whoever else is offended by my agnostic, liberal, feminist ideologies).

First of all, Stockwell Day and the Alliance party want to give the power back to the people of Canada. Well Mr. Day, I have this to say: WE DON'T WANT IT! The fact of the matter is, WE the people of Canada are the Sheep. The Sheep are meant to spend their days grazing and making it to the next morning without being eaten alive by the wolves. We, the Sheep, want Our little pasture of green, green grass, a place to dump Our waste, a place to breed and roam, and, yes, a place where We can shed Our wool and kick back to enjoy the fruits of Our labors.

Mr. Day and his party want Us, the SHEEP, to take charge and hold referendums that will cost about $150 million each. I am sorry but after a full day of taking my child to daycare (which I thankfully receive subsidy for), going to an Institution to hopefully receive a degree (which, by the way, is funded by student loans, grants, and bursaries which help me with the high costs of raising a child as a lone parent), picking my son up from Kindergarten (which follows the curriculum of Alberta Education), and going home to make a meal, study, read, spend quality time with my son etc. etc. etc. I can get about 5 hours of sleep. The last thing I need to do is make a choice that some politician, who receives a nice salary, should be doing for me. I believe this is called Representative Democracy. So for all of you out there who are undecided, let me be the first to welcome you to MY PASTURE. The grass is green AND if you vote you can "BAAAA" all you want.

*Special Correspondent
S. Claus*

HO HO HO!!!! MERRY CHRISTMAS EVERYONE!!!
And a special Christmas greeting for all you boys and girls who have been working SO hard this year writing exams and term papers and labs. This year I have decided that ALL the good boys and girls at Concordia are GOOD!! So not a single one of you has to worry about making it to my "Naughty or Nice" list, unfortunately your professors have not escaped my keen eyes. I have been watching all year, looking to see who's been Nice and who has been Naughty!! I usually don't publish my lists, but my good friends at the Blue & White have been so good this year, I just couldn't say no. So here is my short list of the "NAUGHTY AND NICE" FACULTY (some of them I am STILL watching):

Dr. McNamara - Nice (you don't know where I can get a snazzy red beret do you?)

Dr. Cunningham - oh dear.... UNDECIDED

Dr. Evans - Naughty (something about Stats 211)

Dr. Gow - Nice

Dr. Leske - Nice (Do you want a Didgeridoo for Christmas? I have a spare)

And Last but not Least - President Kraemer, Dean Stuhlmiller, and all the Administration staff - Nice (they paid me well to say that)

Well Children, that is all I can list for right now. I hope you enjoy your Christmas and all the presents I am bringing you. And now for the Instructors: those of you who got the Naughty classification, don't worry Finals are coming up and I am SURE you can make my Nice list then (besides I don't think I have enough coal for all of you)!

HAVE A SAFE, HAPPY, AND A VERY MERRY
CHRISTMAS AND HAPPY NEW YEAR!!!!

ESA CORNER

By Jayne Florence

Greetings, Education Students! All right, have any of you noticed the first semester is OVER? GONE? FINISHED? I mean, ladies and gentlemen, we have reached the end. It is so unbelievable how the time has flown by this term; already finals are upon us. It is interesting speaking with many of you, and seeing the different reactions to the fact that the end is here; nervousness about finals, excitement about going home for the holidays, or exhaustion due to large of amounts of alcohol consumed the night before. No matter what you might be facing, the ESA would like to wish you all the success in the world with your term exams and a relaxing holiday.

The ESA is proud to announce the newest member to our team, Professor Mark Yurick, as our faculty advisor. He is an outstanding professor who offers us expertise, advice, and fresh new ideas. We want to thank you, Dr. Yurick for your time, energy, and support. We are all so grateful and excited to have you as part of our team and just to let you know: snacks are on us next time!

The Christmas spirit is in the air and we are going to be having some fun! Christmas candygrams are going to be on sale the week before school ends and it is a great opportunity to share with your friends. Also, if you haven't had an opportunity to purchase your Christmas formal tickets for December 1st, see Michelle Topolinski immediately in the CSA office, they are going fast and it is going to be a blast!

We have some great ideas planned for next semester. We encourage all of you to join in and make the most of your membership. We will be having tons of new workshops and events, so we hope to see you all out next semester.

Have a great Christmas and be blessed!

Your Horoscope

Sagittarius (November 22-December 21)

Happy Birthday! Just because your special day comes too close to the holidays, don't be a Grinch! Shine bright and you'll be rewarded for your smile.

Capricorn (December 22-January 20)

What were you thinking with that outfit today? Pull it together soon or you're final exams will be your last EVER! Lucky letters are C and E (none of the above).

Aquarius (January 21-February 18)

The cards of Tegler have revealed a letter will be delivered soon. Be wary, there are strings attached. Lucky numbers are 3 and 17.

Pisces (February 19-March 20)

Don't eat yellow snow. Your brain will malfunction during a final exam. Don't eat your pencil. The answers will come in due time.

Aries (March 21-April 19)

Find out the name of that person you've been talking to at the bus stop. There's more than meets the eye. Don't use the grammar check on your computer when you're typing an essay for a French course.

Taurus (April 20-May 20)

Luck has finally arrived for you, but there is no money involved so tighten up your wallet. Avoid wearing Santa hats. You could be mistaken for a reindeer and trampled.

Gemini (May 21-June 20)

Wait until the end of the semester to talk to that special someone. You won't be able to get the words out until exams are finished.

Cancer (June 21-July 22)

You will be involved in an incident involving a patch of ice, a red light and Santa Claus. Don't worry, the cards reveal a positive outcome.

Leo (July 23-August 22)

Your parents will drop in on you unexpectedly. Go home, clean up your house and wait for them. It's time to clean out your locker and find out what that smell is.

Virgo (August 23-September 22)

You will have to be physically removed from a computer screen after the holiday season when you discover a new website. Get out and enjoy the snow or sunshine or you'll end up a couch potato.

Libra (September 23-October 22)

With Christmas just around the corner you'll find your social calendar will start filling up. Don't be too picky. Some of the offers are one shot deals.

Scorpio (October 23-November 21)

Do not cross the street anywhere other than from the corner. Your luck is going to run out if you keep testing it. Try numbers 5 and 8739.

Must Own Albums

Darren Edgar

With the dawn of the new millennium came an overabundance of "Best of..." lists. Writers from every media source came up with their own list of what was seminal within the annals of human history. So here is mine, eleven months late because I am the king of procrastination: a list of albums that I feel any record collection is incomplete without.

Pennywise-Unknown Road (Epitaph Records)

What do you get when you combine driving guitars with metal-inspired riffs, ripping bass lines that tear you apart, an amazing drummer that leaves you scratching your head in disbelief, and an educated lyricist with a great voice? You get an album that has inspired dozens of bands to attempt to copy the sound that Pennywise has made famous.

You can sing along to every song and learn something on a personal level ("Unknown Road", "Try to Conform") or you can yell along to the anthems about society's struggles ("Homesick", "Give and Get").

When you desire a sonic punch to the face or kick to the crotch or if you find yourself in need of venting frustration, this album will foot the bill every time. Put this record on and prepare yourself for the most fist-pumping and glass-shattering forty minutes you will ever experience thanks to these boys from Hermosa Beach.

Ozzy Osbourne-Tribute (Epic Records)

As much as Live at Budokan was a monumental record, so was Tribute for any metal fan growing up in the eighties. If you think that I may be exaggerating because I hold a soft spot for this record since it was the first album that I ever bought, I suggest you listen to it yourself and just try to deny that it does not destroy every other live album out there. Just try to deny that Randy Rhoads was the best guitar player since Jimi Hendrix and that nobody else has even been close to touching him. Just try to deny that Ozzy had an all-star metal lineup with Rhoads, Rudy Sarzo ripping on bass, and Tommy Aldridge pounding the drums. Just try to deny that this album grabs you by the throat and does not let go for over seventy minutes until it ends with studio outtakes allowing Randy Rhoads' obvious technical skills a chance to shine. Just try to deny that after listening to this album you have become an Ozzy fan and that you now worship at the altar of Rhoads.

Go out and get this album and come back and try to deny all these things...you liar!

Ten Foot Pole-Rev (Epitaph Records)

This could be the best album I own. Having said that, I must admit that after hearing the TFP albums released since Rev I have something to say to the band: Give up! Without Tony and Scott you are a disgrace to yourselves and should just pack it in.

This is one of the few albums that I own that I would dare to call perfect; there is nothing about it that I would change, not even its length, because when its over I am satiated and ready to listen to something else because I know that the next time I listen to it I will enjoy it even more than the time previous. I will never get sick of listening to this album.

Scott has an inimitable voice, proven by TFP live shows since he has left the band where Dennis attempts, and fails, to copy his style for the older songs. Tony's drum-work varies from controlled to violent and is always mind-bogglingly appropriate; he keeps it interesting without being excessive. TFP is one of the few dual-guitar bands where it actually sounds like there are two guitarists. Not only do Steve and Dennis play differing guitar lines most of the time but they do it with different styles. Dennis has got the trebly staccato attack while Steve has got the thicker driving force. Not only does this make the music interesting to listen to but also to think about. Rev is an album that has music that is more intelligent than its lyrics.

After having lauded all this praise on this album already, I have to say that what I love most about Rev is that with every listen I find something new to appreciate. At first it was simply the catchy hooks and infectious melodies but now it can be something as seemingly unimportant as feedback or a drum fill that will cause a rush of excitement to run through me.

Everything that Ten Foot Pole has released since this album has paled in comparison but I guess it is unfair to expect a band to be able to follow up a masterpiece with anything comparable.

Def Leppard-High 'N' Dry (Polygram Records)

If you believe that the only good things to come out of the United Kingdom are tea and crumpets, and that movie about the dudes who flash their wieners for cash, then you have obviously forgotten about the fab five...Def Leppard.

It is perfectly understandable to forget "The Leps" if the only material you have been exposed to is from Hysteria and later; however, if you have heard anything from their first three albums you would find it impossible to forget Sheffield's favourite sons.

Almost twenty years after the fact Def Leppard's second album, High 'N' Dry, is still their calling card. It contains all the rocking urgency of their debut record, On Through the Night, but is better produced without falling into the trap of over-production like their follow-up release, Pyromania. It is my humble opinion that Mr. Shania Twain, producer extraordinaire, is a huge reason for the downfall of one of the greatest rock bands ever. Not many people could make the group who wrote "Rock Brigade" sound like robots but "Mutt" Lange manages to do it on Hysteria.

From the opening chords of "Let it Go" to the repetitive finale of "No, No, No", High 'N' Dry kicks out the rocking numbers one after another. Even the ballad "Bringin' on the Heartbreak" has guts. But the outstanding tracks are the ripping instrumental "Switch 625" and the blistering "You Got Me Runnin'"

Another reason for the downfall of Def Leppard was the decision to kick out founding guitarist Pete Willis because of his drinking problem (talk about the pot calling the kettle black, Steve Clark drank himself to death). Besides being the one who brought the band out of the Sheffield spoon factory that was their rehearsal space and into instant popularity, Pete Willis wrote or co-wrote the majority of the material on their first three albums.

For a little guy he was able to play big riffs on his Hamer and look cool doing it. And even though he got the boot, and was replaced, during the recording of Pyromania, his songs and guitar tracks are still inspiring the album. Yet another reason why the post-Willis Def Leppard material sucks! Do we all remember "Do You Wanna Get Rocked"? Oh, how far have we fallen?

Despite how crappy this band has been for the past fifteen years, High 'N' Dry still stands as a testament to how good they were. This album rocks so much that I was able to listen to it all the way on the drive home from Seattle. When was the last time you listened to a record for fourteen hours straight? I rest my case. All hail Pete Willis, for we are the Rock Brigade.

How Greg VanHaaften Saved The Day: A Peer Support Story

Whitney Jensen, Peer Support co-facilitator

It all started with an idea. An idea to create unity and fun within the campus of Concordia. Once this idea was born, generations of brainstorming webs began to evolve. The first union of the Peer Support group occurred on the second Thursday of Fall semester 2000. On that day, the faces of the people who "really care" were introduced to each other and we began to make plans.

As Concordia's Peer Support team is an independent group we were motivated to raise our own funds to accomplish our goals: support and TLC. for our fellow students. Wanting to get as much together as possible and to create entertainment for our fellow Concordians, a small fundraiser was organized to create flowers from dirt. Through awesome support for higher learning and a caring worldly atmosphere from the King's Horse Pub, a fun filled night of liquid refreshments, live rockin' music, games, and fellowship came to be. The Peer Support Study Time Stress Relief Party was an exploding success for Peer Support.

All was a smooth ride for the most part except for when the heart of the entertainment was threatened just a few hours before the occasion. (This is where Greg comes in to save the day.) Everything was all set up for our cherished Sian Gregory to callous his fingertips for the enjoyment of his peers, when suddenly we were denied two microphone stands to amplify Sian's soul-filling music. Prayers were said and through unity Peer Support found some support from its invaluable member Greg VanHaaften. "Jesus truly does help in a time of need" was the revelation of the day when Greg's Dad met us at Riverbend church to supply us with two stands (including one with a boom). "Aaah," came the sigh of relief from the very stressed Sian, and a great big "Thank You" was offered to the heavens above. We were on our way to what would be the greatest night that many of us had had in a long, long time.

Sian played beautifully and the people kicked back, relaxed, and got to know one another. "We all just sort've absorbed the music and the mature atmosphere," stated a couple whom are regulars at the very hospitable pub. They also benefited from Peer Support's cheap tickets: lots of fun, steal of a deal. "They are such a mature crowd," stated a staff member from The Horse. Songs were sung, jokes were shared, and games helped along the mingling. Smiles were everywhere! Birthdays were also celebrated at the event; Taz(23) and Tyler(20) shared their special days.

An infinite and ongoing thank-you is expressed to everyone who showed up and supported Peer Support to support them. Muchas Gracias senors and senioritas! Keep an eye out for upcoming events held by Peer Support and join in on the free (or next to free) fun, entertainment, and education. Let's lose the stress and settle for nothing less knowing that Peer Support has done it's best... for all! Adios and Vaja con dios.
